This training offers an introduction, exposure, immersion and practice in the vast subject of Music and Medicine. This is an opportunity for a personal growth journey, deepening the practice of yoga aspirants, as well as enhancing the professional work of therapists, educators, wellness specialists, and health and social workers. The program offers the foundations of a gradual entry into the world and practice of sound healing.

In a concentrated one week training the participants will learn about the principles and concepts of Therapeutic Music & Sound Healing:

- Nada Brahman - a sound philosophy
- Listening contemplations, Nada Yoga and Toning practices
- Organology - musical instruments of the world and their therapeutic significance
- Musical foundation, harmony, dissonance and resonance
- The building blocks of therapeutic sound - tone, tempo and pattern
- Mapping the human embodiment and integral psychology
- Biofield, Perception and Instrumentations
- Overview of international sound work and music therapy
- The art of movement and touch

An experienced faculty of experts in the respective fields will be teaching. The learning process includes theory, exercises, contemplations and self-practice. To become a certified Sound Wellness Practitioner requires further training, apprentice practices and continuing consultancy with the trainers.
